2016 Sponsorship Proposal

Vision

The goal of CSVConf is to bring together data makers from different fields.

Our key focus areas are open science, data journalism and open government. These are three really exciting areas that we think need more cross pollination with the wider software industry.

We are the community driven conference to contrast the more business driven 'big data' conferences.

The conference isn't literally about the CSV file format, but rather what the CSV represents in regards to our ideals (data interoperability, hackability, simplicity, etc).

Organization

There are four core organizers and an additional team of volunteers. CSVConf is a not-for-profit conference, our philosophy is that money should go in to making the conference better. The primary use of sponsorship money is to fly in and accommodate speakers who cannot otherwise attend.

Core organizing committee:

John Chodacki - California Digital Library

Martin Fenner - Datacite

Max Ogden - dat

Karthik Ram - rOpenSci
